THE PARADE ON WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

Grandfather and Grandmother had a flag.
It was an old, old flag.
It was nearly as old as Father.
They gave the flag to Father.
He loved the old flag.
Patty and Ned loved it, too.
They hung it out of the window every
Flag Day.
One day Father said, "There will be a parade on George Washington's Birthday.
It will be a fine parade.
I will take Patty and Ned to see it."
"That will be great fun," said Ned.
The children jumped for joy.
"Hurrah! hurrah!" they cried.

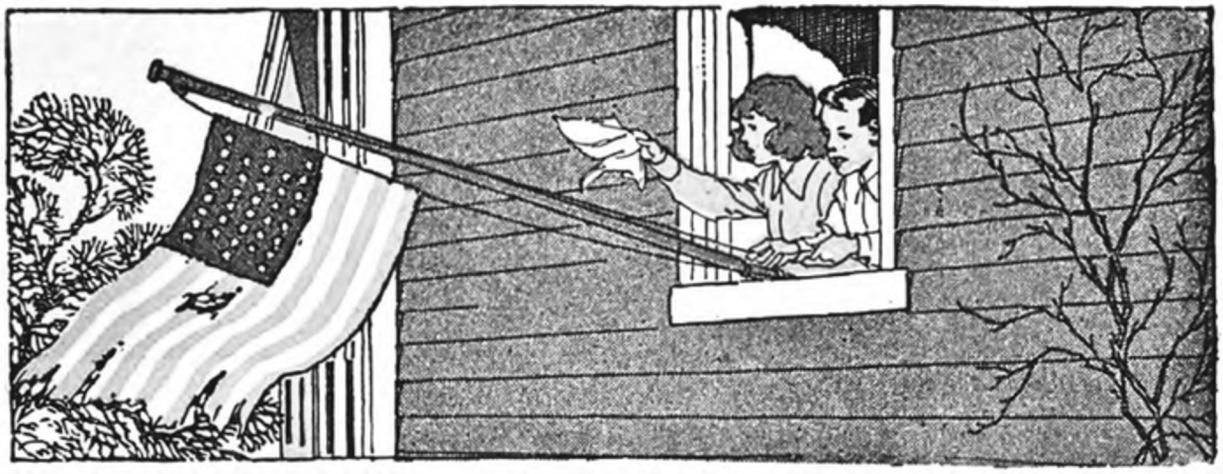
Lesson 76

Read this silently and then out loud.



The great day came at last.
But Father could not take Ned and Patty to the parade.
Their Grandmother was sick.
Father and Mother had to go to see her.
Patty and Ned felt very sad.
But they did not cry. Oh, no!
Patty said, "We can not see the parade.
But we can hang our flag out of the window."
"Yes," said Ned. "Father and Mother would like us to do that."
So they hung the flag out of the window.

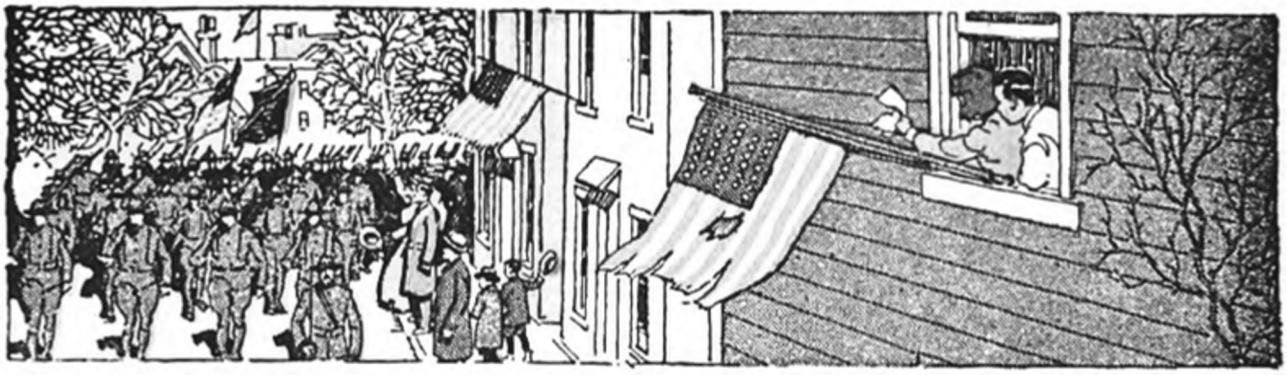
Lesson 76

Read this silently and then out loud.



Soon they heard a great noise.
"Oh, it is the parade!" said Ned.
"It is coming down our street.
I am so glad our flag is out."
The parade went right by the house.
Every one saw the old, old flag.
They said, "Hurrah for the old, old flag!"
Patty and Ned felt very proud.
Soon Father and Mother came home.
Patty and Ned told them about the parade.
"Oh! we had a wonderful day!" said Patty.
"Hurrah for the old, old flag!" said Ned.
"Hurrah for George Washington!" said
Father.
