The Little Red Hen

Once upon a time, there was a Little Red Hen who lived on a farm. One day, the Little Red Hen found some grains of wheat and asked her animal friends if they would help her plant them.

"Who will help me plant the wheat?" she asked.

"Not I," said the cow.

"Not I," said the pig.

"Not I," said the duck.

"Then I will plant it myself," said the Little Red Hen, and she did.

As the wheat grew, the Little Red Hen asked her friends again if they would help her harvest it.

"Who will help me harvest the wheat?" she asked.

"Not I," said the cow.

"Not I," said the pig.

"Not I," said the duck.

"Then I will harvest it myself," said the Little Red Hen, and she did.

Next, the Little Red Hen asked her friends if they would help her take the wheat to the mill to be ground into flour.

"Who will help me take the wheat to the mill?" she asked.

"Not I," said the cow.

"Not I," said the pig.

"Not I," said the duck.

"Then I will take it myself," said the Little Red Hen, and she did.

Finally, the Little Red Hen asked her friends if they would help her bake the flour into bread.

"Who will help me bake the bread?" she asked.

"Not I," said the cow.

"Not I," said the pig.

"Not I," said the duck.

"Then I will bake it myself," said the Little Red Hen, and she did.

When the bread was done, the Little Red Hen's friends were eager to help her eat it.

"Who will help me eat the bread?" she asked.

"I will," said the cow.

"I will," said the pig.

"I will," said the duck.

"No," said the Little Red Hen. "Since none of you helped me plant the wheat, harvest it, take it to the mill, or bake it into bread, none of you will help me eat it."
